9. Objectives	This course provides an in-depth, applied understanding of social entrepreneurship - where innovation, business acumen, and social impact converge. Students will understand the implications of the existence of 'social' or 'positive' businesses in the context of our wider political economic system, as well as learn to identify, assess, fund, and scale ventures that address pressing social and environmental challenges locally and globally. The curriculum explores the social entrepreneurial mindset, emphasizing sustainable impact models and the financial landscape of mission-driven enterprises. Through real-world case studies and insights from social ventures, students will examine various business models, from hybrid structures to for-profit enterprises with a social mission. A key focus is the introduction to impact investing and funding mechanisms, helping students understand how capital flows into social enterprises, what investors prioritize, and how social entrepreneurs secure funding. Additionally, the course delves into scaling strategies and systemic change, teaching students how to measure and communicate impact effectively to investors, policymakers, and other

	stakeholders. Finally, social entrepreneurial frameworks will form the basis of applied learning through discussions, workshops, team projects, and guidance from industry professionals. Students will refine their entrepreneurial, problem-solving, and business development skills by developing and pitching their own social enterprise ideas.
